

Incident Response Training

CC NC-BY-SA
Otter Tech LLC
sharp@otter.technology

Introductions:

Name

Pronouns you use and what events you organize or what community you lead

Ground Rules

CC BY Steve Johnson

- This is a safe(r) space
- If you are asked to stop, you will stop
- You may leave at any time
- Be open to new knowledge
- Acknowledge different lived experiences

Agenda

- Who is an incident responder?
- Taking an incident report
- Practice 1
- Responding to a report
- Practice 2
- Advanced topics, questions, and/or more practice

Who is an incident responder?

- Takes incident reports
- Assesses the situation
- Finds additional help
- Resolves the incident
- Responds to those impacted
- Communicates incident to other staff

CC BY Open Knowledge

Taking an Incident Report: LASER

Before: Go to a quiet, private place (or private message/email)

- Listen without judgment
- Ask clarifying questions
- Seek assistance or resources as needed
- Ensure everyone is safe
- Report or Respond to the incident

After: Thank reporter for reporting the incident

Example:
Receiving Reports

Practice Receiving Reports

Incident Report Practice

- Group discussion:
 - describe the incident
 - any additional witnesses?
 - any additional details?

Bias in Receiving Incident Reports

- Responders gathered different information
- Reporters have different lived experiences
- Don't use "judgment" words
- Watch yourself for defensiveness
- Be cautious about empathy for reported person

Microaggressions & Trust

- Unconscious bias made invisible by privilege
- Death by 1,000 paper cuts
- Emotional labor
- People often over-react
- Different lived experiences

CC BY Andrew McGill

Intent is Not Magic

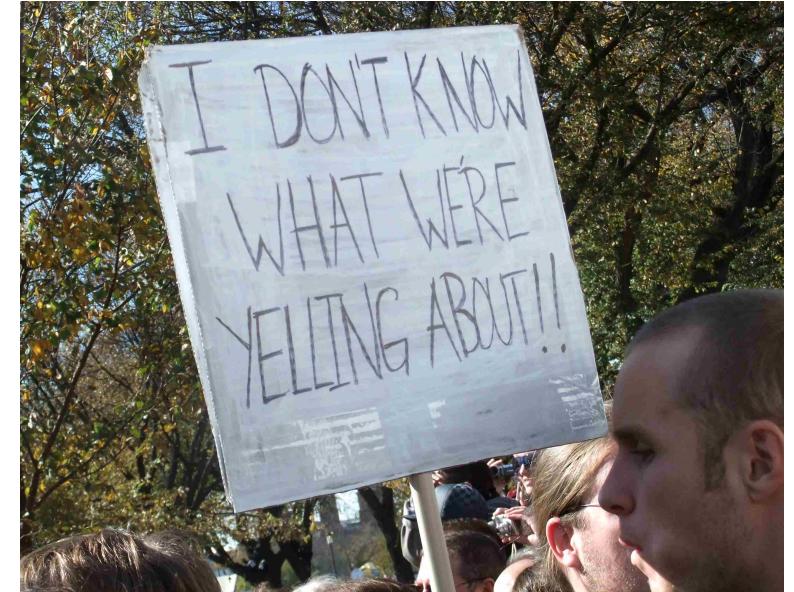

- Ignorance is no excuse
- Actions have impact
- No tone policing victims
- Reverse racism isn't real
- No “I'm sorry if I hurt you”

CC BY Fabricio Zuardi
(modified)

Personal Conflicts

- Not all conflicts will be a Code of Conduct violation
- Is this part of a larger pattern of behavior?
- Other examples of emotional or verbal abuse?
- Possible resolutions:
 - Ask not to contact each other
 - Assign different areas of work
 - Assign different evening events
 - Attend on different years

CC BY Martha Soukup

False Reporting: Power Dynamics

- What does a reporter have to lose?
 - Reputation
 - Career
 - Financial support
 - Safety
 - Mental health
- What does the reported person have to lose?

CC BY Adam Lehman

Review All Reports Carefully

- Microaggressions are under reported
- Does a report “punch up” or “punch down”?
- Assume good intent
- Don't victim blame
- Don't assume a friend is innocent or had good intent

CC BY Adam Lehman

(Break?)

Following up on Incident Reports

Evaluating Risk

	Low Risk	High Risk
Low Impact	Microaggression in conversation Microaggression in private message	Attendee has past sexual assault allegations Contributor repeatedly pushes boundaries
High Impact	Racist or sexist joke during presentation Inappropriate joke on a public channel	Ongoing harassment or stalking Online harassment campaign or doxxing

Deciding Response

	Low Risk	High Risk
Low Impact	“That's not appropriate.” “You will be removed if you continue”	Create safety plan Monitor and document patterns of behavior, possibly warn or ban
High Impact	Reprimand or removal Public response from staff or organization	Coordinated planning Additional resources Reach out to others

Following up with the reported person

- Find a private place (or send a private email)
- Repeat the facts with specific examples
- Let them respond
- Focus on the impact on the reporter(s)
- Reiterate the consequences of their behavior
- Don't reassure
- Don't let them contact reporter
- Give them a concrete plan of action for modifying their behavior

Example:
Following up with the Reported Person

Practice: Following up with the Reported Person

Following up with reporters

- Follow up is optional
- Try to talk to everyone impacted
- May need a public statement
- Whisper networks exist
- Don't justify your actions
- Document the incident
- May need to notify volunteers

Advanced Topics

Dealing with Unwelcome Attendees

- “You aren’t permitted to attend the conference”
- Don’t provide details
- Ask them to leave
- “This is a private venue”
- Get onsite help
- Report for trespassing
- Know your local trespassing laws

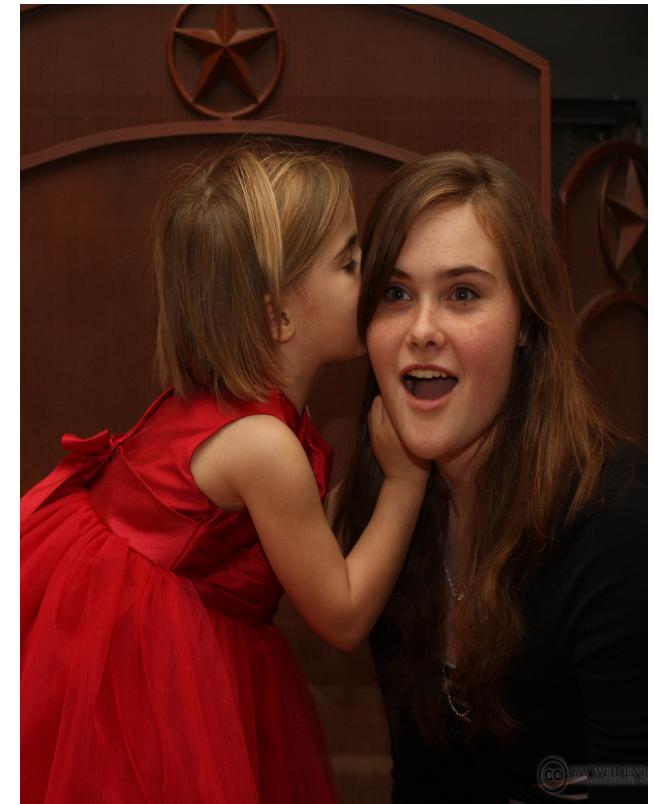

CC BY Mike Mozart

Dealing with Weapons Policy Violations

- “Weapons are not allowed at our conference”
- Ask them to leave
- Come back without the weapon
- Do not argue, be firm
- Ask staff, response team, security to help
- If there is a safety risk, call 911

Conflicts of Interest

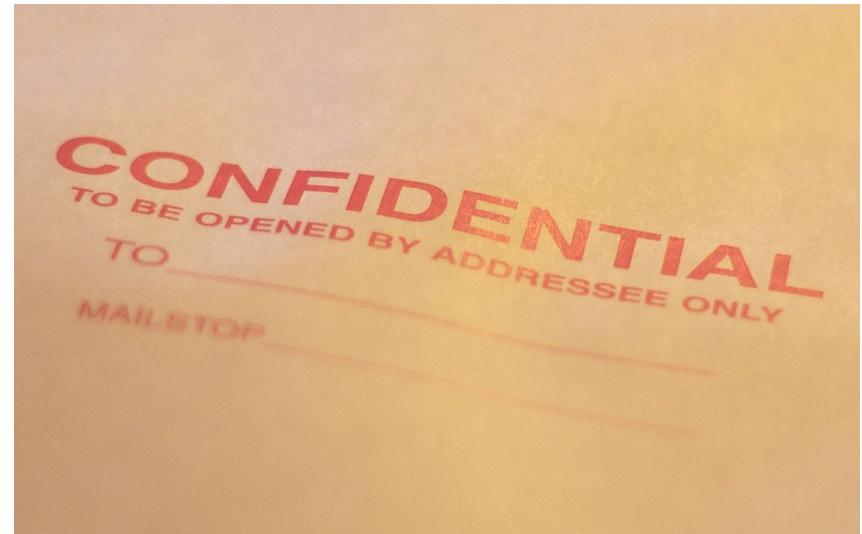

- Is anyone a friend or coworker?
 - conference staff or volunteers
 - incident response team
 - papers committee
 - sponsors
- Review leadership positions for potential leaks:
 - other incident responders
 - volunteers & staff
 - papers committee
 - board members

CC BY Jay Weldenbach

Confidentiality Issues

- Reporter fears retaliation
- NDAs & severance
- Police Investigation
- Limit incident docs access
- Ask around (discretely)
- Often multiple incidents
- Other grounds to dismiss

CC BY Casey Marshall

Known Harassers

- Not just internet trolls
- Stalkers do show up
- Power plays & disruption
- Have a mitigation plan
- Strict confidentiality plan
- Ensure attendee safety

CC BY Paul VanDerWerf